

Woman hits husband with slipper on moving bike; the Internet reacts to chaotic 'kalesh': 'Another reason not to get married'

The video was recorded by a passerby in Lucknow, Uttar Pradesh.

A surprising and chaotic video from Uttar Pradesh's Lucknow is quickly gaining attention online. It shows a man and a woman—reportedly husband and wife—riding a two-wheeler while arguing with each other. The footage was shared by the well-known "Ghar ke Kalesh" account on X, and viewers can't stop talking about it.

In the clip, the man is driving the bike, and the woman is seated behind him. Suddenly, without warning, she begins hitting him with a slipper. First, she strikes his right side, then switches to the left, all while pointing towards something off-screen. What catches everyone's eye is the man's complete lack of reaction—he doesn't flinch, turn, or say anything, just keeps driving as if nothing unusual is happening.

The situation quickly escalates as the woman starts hitting him from all directions—front, side, everywhere—while the bike continues to move. Adding to the recklessness, neither of them is wearing helmets.

The moment was caught on camera by a passerby, and has gone viral. The caption of the post reads, "Kalesh b/w Husband and wife on running bike, Wife started beating her husband over some mutual dispute In Lucknow UP."

The video has been viewed over 400,000 times, with many sharing their thoughts in the comments. One viewer said, "Abhi mard karta kalesh toh public hyper ho jaati" (If the man had created a scene, the public would have gone hyper).

Another user wrote, "If 'Don't get caught if you're cheating with wife' had a face." A third user said, "Another day, another reason not to get married," echoing the general disbelief and cynicism around the incident.

A fourth individual wrote, "This is one of the reasons why husbands should always wear a helmet."
